Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 23 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Most areas seeing some rain at times today and tomorrow.

Today:
Cold and cloudy across Scotland with early rain turning heavier and more widespread later with some hill snow in the north. Elsewhere, early rain in the west moves east across England and Wales, brighter weather following into the west later.

Tonight:
Cloudy with spells of rain and hill snow over Scotland. Elsewhere, drier with some clear spells but also risk of fog patches, mainly eastern England and Northern Ireland.

Friday:
Scotland cold and windy with early rain and hill snow sinking south into far northern England later. Elsewhere, early fog patches then rain, heavy at times, spreading from the west.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cold with a few wintry showers in the N. Milder with rain at times in the S. In between, some rain, sleet or, mainly hill, snow. Breezy in places.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.